

SAVING THE GREAT OUTDOORS

PASS THE BATON TO OUR NEXT GREAT GUARDIANS!

Adirondack Wild works every day to keep “Forever Wild” living and active in the hearts and minds of folks of all ages. At Adirondack Wild we mentor young folks every chance we get.

During the 50th Anniversary of the 1964 Wilderness Act, we brought these students from SUNY Potsdam to Howard Zahniser’s Adirondack Cabin “Mateskared” (left) and Paul Schaefer’s “Beaver House” (right).

We know that one generation can’t save the future of the Great Outdoors all by itself. So we grasped the baton from our conservation mentors Paul Schaefer, Anne LaBastille and Clarence Petty, just as they grasped it from earlier conservation champions like Bob Marshall and John Apperson.

Helping to pass the baton to our next generation can be one of your great and most lasting legacies. The young person you orient to wilderness and nature today could very well become its next great guardian!

Keeping the Adirondacks and Catskills wild — it’s a great tradition.

WILDERNESS, PASS IT ON . . .
